My little company has been harmed by Microsoft, but I can only imagine one entity that can make a worse mess of the delicate job of providing software necessary for our best chance of technological and social progress, and that is any of the arms of the U.S. Federal Government. Microsoft is by far the least harmful entity in this fight over Governmental or Business control of this sensitive area, and attempts to make this situation better through governmental control, because of its dynamic nature, is doomed to the most dismal failure.
